The pypyodbc package is actually just one pure Python script. It is basically a reimplementation of pyodbc but in pure Python. What this means is that pyodbc is a Python wrapper around a C++ backend whereas pypyodbc is only Python code. It supports the same API as the previous module so you should be able to use them interchangeably in most cases. Thus I won't be showing any examples here since the only difference is the import.
