Quick Quiz!

1 In Bash shell, you have to "EXPORT" the declared environmental variables. Is this statement True or False?

2 Which of these is the correct option to assign A variable's value to B variable?

3 How do we display Environment variables on terminal?

4 Which of the following is not an Environment variable?

5 Which of the following command is used to declare and initialize environment variables?

6  What's the correct way to assign parameters to functions?

7  A local variable is only accessible in:

8   By default, all variables in a Shell are stored as:

9   Variables in Shell need to be declared first before assigning them a value, otherwise they will generate an error. Is this statement true or false?

10   What's the use of `{}` in a variable name?

Check Answers